

Argument against

The constitution is explicit in its wording regarding voting capabilities of housing representatives. Voting members are only department representatives and representatives from certain affinity groups that can bring up perspectives from traditionally underrepresented minorities in the Graduate Student Body. Housing representatives don't necessarily represent the viewpoint of an underrepresented minority of the students since any student can bring up concerns to their department representative even about problems regarding their housing situation.

If the housing representatives don't come to GSG Assembly, quorum will be harder to reach.
